MOKENA HAS NEW POLICE CHIEF

Former Chief John Frisch Quits Job in Stormy Council Session; August Hentsch appointed

Wordy fireworks marked the Mokena council meeting last Wednesday night. The committee on fire and water called on Police Chief John Frisch who was also in charge of the village pumping station to explain why there was only six feet of water in the water tower the night of the MacMahan fire several weeks ago and why he was not at the fire. Chief Frisch claimed he had pumped the tank full of water during the day, but would not say where he was at the time of the fire. Further questioning by the committee nettled the officer and he flew into a rage, tore off his star amid a volley of oaths and throwing it on the council table he shouted he was thru with the job and berated the board members, calling them everything but gentlemen. The board accepted his resignation immediately and appointed August Hentsch as police chief and water pumper.

Former chief Frisch was on the force quite a number of years. A number of years ago he got angry at the city council and "resigned" but at the time the village board prevailed on him to reconsider his action which he did and went back on the job, but this time his resignation was accepted without any further questions.

Chief Hentsch has had 8 knights of the road in his hotel since he is police and has managed to keep the water tower filled with water every day.

Raymond Holland and Family Vanish From Mokena

Several weeks ago the News-Bulletin engaged the services of Raymond Holland, an all around printer and linotype operator, of Ramsey, Ill. After being on the job for a short time, Mr. Holland sent for his wife and three year old daughter to come, who were staying with Mrs. Holland's parents at Mount Vernon, Ill. Upon their arrival the family took up light house keeping rooms in the E. J. Woods home. Monday midnight Mr. Holland and his family suddenly disappeared without leaving any forwarding address. The sudden departure is shrouded in mystery and there is much speculation as to the reason for the hasty exodus.

As the mid-night west bound R. I. train is the last train out of Mokena during the night, it is supposed they took this train. They had rented a box at the local post office but left no forwarding and mail is being held here for them now.

When Mr. Holland applied for the job he said he wanted a permanent one and asked to be given an opportunity to make good which was given him. He was satisfied with his job and drew his pay in full on Saturday and did not intimate that he was thinking of leaving. He was in the jewelry business at Ramsey before coming here and had quite a lot of business trouble. He said he had filed a petition in bankruptcy thru Attorney Scerial Thompson of Harrisburg, Ill. Creditors appeared to be pressing him pretty hard, but whether this was the reason for his sudden disappearance, is not known.

Church Boundary Line set

During the past week a number of people enquired regarding the southern boundary of the Sacred Heart and the Sag Bridge parishes. In 1867 according to records the southern boundary of said parishes were established by the Bishop of Chicago at 135th street.

Merry Christmas to all.

M. E. Bazaar Dec. 8

The annual Mokena M. E. Ladies Aid bazaar and supper will be held at the St. John church parlor on December 8th. All invited.

800 Pheasants Put on Orland Preserves

Farmers around Orland are joining what is known as the Southern Cook County Game Protective Association similar to the Eastern Will County Game Protective Association. Those joining the Orland Association designate their farm a preserve for game and are thus given state protection according to John Kline, investigator for the Department of Game Conservation.

Mr. Kline states that 800 pheasants were shipped into this territory and turned loose by the state recently. The past week 29 pheasants were shot by Chicago Hunters. One hunter was caught with 13 in his possession. His case is to come up in Blue Island this week. All game law violations will be pushed to the limit.

Mr. Kline says the state expects to stock the preserves and farms with about 2400 quail next spring. The state is anxious to provide game, but also expects its game laws to be observed so that there will not be a wholesale slaughter of game.

Sale of Xmas seals now on

As usual at this season of the year there comes to every community in the world, the Christmas Seal. It is a small seal, and whose bodies tuberculosis has weakened and tortured and whose minds are dull and saddened. To plead for the thousands who might succumb to this dreadful disease unless we safeguard them. To plead for the protection of little children and our youth.

Again the Christmas Seal comes to tell you that it is not a losing fight. That since it began in 1907 the death rate from tuberculosis has been cut in half and that the battle against it gains ground day by day. But in spite of this we find that one out of every four who die between the ages of 15 and 45, dies of tuberculosis. It makes orphans of more children and breaks up more homes than any other disease.

Pastuer said that "It is within the province of man to rid himself of every contagious disease." That statement is true and if we all lend as much as we possibly can, we can wipe out the most dreadful disease of all—tuberculosis.

The Christmas Seal is the most powerful ally in this fight. It gives the sufferers in Will County doctors, nurses, clinics, physical examination, fresh air, sunshine, rest and a knowledge of ways of safeguarding the community.

The educational value of the message carried by the Christmas Seal cannot be estimated, but it has been the most important value of the movement. Each one is a reminder of the value of Positive Health and the care necessary to attain it. It is also an expression of a spirit of helpfulness and human kindness which acts as a lever for our community.

The health and lives of hundreds of people depend upon these little seals.

Used on packages and letters, the three carol singers on this year's seal will carry everywhere a song of hope and gladness along with a "Merry Christmas".

Interesting Oak Lawn Notes

Brotherhood Puts Over Big Supper

The St. John Brotherhood of Mokena put on a real snappy affair Wednesday night when they gave an entertainment and supper. The men were the cooks, waiters and dish washers and did a real job. Oysters and sauer kraut and pork were the chief items on the menu.

The St. John Orchestra furnished a fine musical program. In addition there was a motion picture program which was very fine. In all this was one of the best social affairs the Brotherhood has sponsored thus far and was a rip roaring success.

Mokena Football Team plays Last Game Sunday

The Chicago Panthers were defeated last Sunday for the second time this year by the Mokena football team, the score being 26 to 0. The four touchdowns were made by Hall, Koeller, Heiman and Marti. The boys were covered with mud beyond recognition. The next game will be with the Chicago Heights Maulers at Shicks field Sunday Dec 5 this is probably the last game this year lets all come out and see the spirit in which the boys play the game.

Walter Fisher's Widow Given A Reward of $150

Mrs. Ethel Fisher, widow of the late deputy Walter Fisher of Mokena was awarded a reward of $150 last week when W. O. Baumgardner, a postal inspector called on her and presented her with a check for $150 from the Albert R. Lee Co., of New York who carried the insurance on the $37,500 payroll which a mail bandit stole at Indiana Harbor and who shot deputy Fisher to death when he attempted to arrest him on the Mokena Orland road. The holdup and shooting occurred April 14th of this year. As the bandit was caught and practically all of the loot recovered, Robert J. Pollitt, a former postal department employee and now connected with the New York concern made the suggestion that this sum be given her as a reward for the brave services of her dead husband.

News and Notes of Orland

There could be few brides more dainty and exquisitely appealing than Miss Augusta Steffen of Orland who became the wife of Mr. Robert Cure at a ten o'clock Nuptial Mass, Sat. the 27th. The celebrant of the Mass was Rev. Wm. Gorey pastor.

Lohengrin's wedding march was played. Miss Steffen wore a lovely frock of white beaded georgette over satin, a dainty tulle veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried white bride roses. Miss Rose Morganthaler of Palos served as maid of honor. She was attired in orchid georgette and carried pink roses. The groomsmen were Mr. Milburn Miller, nephew of the groom. The wedding dinner was served at the home of Mr. John Cure, the groom's father. The evening was spent in dancing. The guests presented the newly married couple with many lovely gifts.

Sunday evening another dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cure was served at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Steffen.

Plans for the bunco party to be given by the Altar and Rosary Society of St. Michael's church on Saturday are completed. There will be beautiful prizes, generously donated by parishioners and a good lunch.

The lunch served at the Ziemetz Sisters sale cleared $25. It was a beautiful sunny but cold day and how those men did enjoy the scalding hot coffee and piping hot dog sandwiches. The ladies had previously and cannily advertised their wares by walking before the crowd quietly munching a steaming "hot dog" sandwich. At the dinner

Dr. and Mrs. Schussler, Mrs. Hazel McGovern and son Jackie, left Friday for Brownville, Texas where they will spend the winter.

Beret and Earlap Type Smart; Paris Features Fabric Contrast

VERY considerate is it of our milliners this winter to make way for our fur collars by creating hats which have little or no brim. Of course with brims conspicuous by their absence, responsibility for the conveying of the style message devolves to a great extent upon the crowns of our hats.

There is the little hat shown first in this group; modishness is written all over it, yet it is mostly all crown save just a suggestion of a cunning little brim, forming an earlap effect at the back. This clever model is styled of arctic blue antelope felt, edged with ing touch to this charming model. Paris has become interested in suits of the youthful short-jacket type. Many are the fascinating interpretations which this newest mode promises. The fact that the short-jacketed costumes feature fabric contrasts adds to their novelty. Velvet or velveteen for the jacket, with kasha cloth, crepella or some other wool material for the skirt outlines one of the various developments of this recent style innovation.

By the way, the latest millinery sen- sation is the earlap hat. A fetching version of this new type is portrayed in the center of this picture. For this the designer draped and slashed and folded into place a cameo-brown felt hood, blinding it with grograin rib- bon of self shade, adding a gold buckle fastening.

In the stylish beret shown to the right at the top again is demonstrated the idea of hats trending mostly to crown these days. The beret, of which this is an arresting exponent, is proving immensely popular. This one

A band of felt arranged as a sash about the crown line of a soft draped felt hood describes the stunning shape to the left below.

Again the beret attains distinction in the model shown last in this group. The broad band of black belting rib- bon together with two brushes of black burnt peacock impart the finish-

BAKER'S BREAKFAST COCOA

Means Something

The United States Food Standards define "Breakfast" cocoa as cocoa containing not less than 22% of cocoa fat. Many cheap cocoas (which cannot be labeled "Breakfast" cocoa) contain not more than 14% or 15% of fat. Baker's Breakfast Cocoa contains not less than 26% of cocoa fat, almost one-fifth more than Government requirement. The phrase Baker's Breakfast Cocoa means a pure, delicious cocoa of high quality and possessing a considerable amount of nourishment.

Gun Silencers Used on Railroad Engines

Oil-electric locomotives for railroad yard use in cities would wake up the neighborhood all night long were it not for gun silencers. These devices, invented for use on firearms for war service, so that gunners might fire silently, have found a new and growing use.

The silencers, unlike automobile ex- haust mufflers, do not reduce noise by placing obstructions in the path of the discharged gases, but by passing the exhaust through the peculiarly constructed silencing chamber. Oil- electric engines, designed especially for railroad switching service, gen- erate their power aboard without emit- ting the smoke and noise.

NEW LENOX

NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

New Lenox took another step forward Saturday last by voting in a new school building and along with it the bond issue.

This no doubt will be a great asset to New Lenox under the present developments and from the outlook it is only one of the many steps she will have to take in the near future.

More power to New Lenox.

NEW LENOX BOOSTER

A community reception was given in the M. E. church in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Galloway last Tuesday evening. A very fine program consisting of readings, and musical numbers was given by the New Lenox young people of which Mrs. Wm. Sayers had charge. New Lenox has some very promising talented young people in it, which all helps to make an ideal community. Mrs. Edward Francis in behalf of the Ladies Aid, presented Mrs. Galloway with a large bouquet of chrysanthemums. After this the guests were invited into the church parlors to partake of the delicious ice cream, cake and coffee. The guests all wished Rev. and Mrs. Galloway another year of happiness in this community.

Mrs. Fred Gould has returned from the Silver Cross hospital and her many friends are glad to see her back home again.

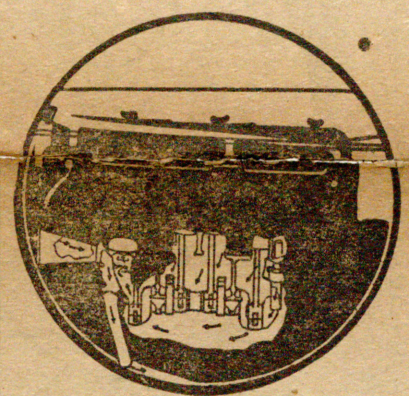

Miss Jane Robinson was pleasantly surprised in her home last Friday night by her young people. received many birthday gifts. Light refreshments were served by Mrs. Robinson.

Last Saturday night Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Bethel celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding by entertaining a large company of relatives and friends at the Grange hall. A fine time was had by all. The affair was an invitation one and it is said 125 invitations were issued.

Mr. and Mrs. Archie Corp and daughter spent Thanksgiving with relatives in Essex.

A special service for fathers and sons will be held at the M. E. church this coming Sunday night by Rev. Mr. Galloway. Several of the Boy Scouts will take part in the service.

Stock in the new New Lenox State Bank is finding a ready sale at $110 per share. Local people are being given the first opportunity to buy this stock.

No Engine Fumes in Buick Closed Cars!

In the 1927 Buick, the new Vacuum Ventilator pulls engine fumes and gases from the crankcase and ejects them outside the car.

This vital new Buick improvement does away with noxious odors. It adds greater luxury and pleasure to enclosed car operation.

The Vacuum Ventilator serves another very important purpose. With it, crankcase vapors have no opportunity to condense and dilute the oil. Owners of 1927 Buicks are advised to drain their crankcase oil only 4 times during the year.

For luxury, and for economy, own a Buick.

Mrs. Anna Higgins has taken an apartment in the city for the winter.

OAK LAWN SCHOOL

On Friday evening, Nov. 19th the Oak Lawn School had its "Achievement Night". The Auditorium was so crowded that many people had to stand in the back as well as in the corridors. The reason why there were so many parents and friends was that they knew if they came their evening would be well spent. The program was as follows:

1. Unison, Mr. Sword. America The Star Spangled Banner. How Do You Do song.

2. Achievement meeting led by its officers who are:

President William Theres, Vice-President Lucille Moore, Secretary Margaret Bohn, Assistant Clara Mildred Weidner, Treasurer Clara Hossman. After the Achievement Club had conducted its business meeting the entire school sang "The Cook County Achievement Song."

3. First and second grades—Mrs. Kretton and Miss Skinner. Girls—The Sandman. Thanksgiving Song. Boys—The Jolly Boot Blacks.

4. Third grade—Miss Hyland and Miss Skinner. "Here Comes the Flag." A group dressed in their pajamas and night gowns sang "Pillar-Fites" and had a grand and glorious "Pillar-Fite" after the song.

5. Fourth and fifth grades—Miss Lushbaugh's girls dressed as Pilgrim Maidens sang a song by that name. The entire room sang—"Thanksgiving at Grandpa's" "November", "Thankful Children"

6. Miss McClaughry gave a very interesting talk on "Achievement Work in Cook County."

7. Sixth grade, Miss Kobick. A play by the boys "Carelessness". Song by the girls "Grown-up Land".

8. Lucille Moore and Augusta Chapetti sang "When the Red, Red Robin Goes Bob-Bob-Bobbin' Along".

9. A recitation by Clinton Kellams "Signs of the times."

10. Mr. Mueller our speaker of the evening gave a timely and interesting discourse.

LICK SKILLIT (A suburb of Oak Lawn)

It is thought that Jim Bledsoe is getting religion as he has stopped kicking his dog and doesn't speak of his wife as "that old hen" any more.

Alma Baker is much chagrined because her pet tom cat Teddy, has been accused of sucking the neighbor's hen's eggs.

Bill Smithers with his bass drum and Amanda Higgins with her accordion met at the blacksmith shop last evening to practice on the anvil chorus which they expect to give at a concert soon.

Bill Higgins went to Blue Island last Saturday morning and didn't get back until 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The neighbors say that they heard his wife talking loud for an hour after he came in.

Whenever they have any public sales around here they always treat to "hard cider".

A few of those new sorghum molasses have been received at Nortnagel's store.

Cy Hawkins has bought a new red vest to wear to church and when he goes courting, "Oh you Cy".

Jim Slivers had pig shank and cabbage for dinner last Sunday and he says that it was feast for the gods.

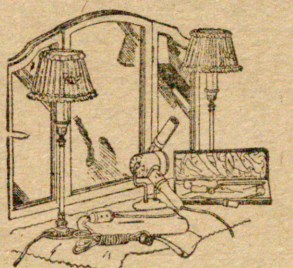

Tom Hacker went to River's last Saturday and bought two joints of stove pipe at 15c per joint. It pays to trade at Oak Lawn.

Have Kidneys Examined By Your Doctor

Take Salts to Wash Kidneys If Back Pains You or Bladder Bothers

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

FULL CHRISTMAS STOCKINGS

Christmas Daring

by Eleanor E. King

LOUISE had not been oblivious to the courteous "How do you do's" and attempts at conversation—at least those that could be appropriately engaged in from the other side of the bars. The conversation assumed such a form as: "Two fives, a ten or some ones?" with an accompanying smile. Today, as she entered the great, white stone building, she made a resolve. She wrote her check and approached the desk. The smile and the same "How do you do?" greeted Louise. She hesitated, then nervously herself to meet the occasion and with quivering smile burst forth:

"Did—didn't I meet you at the University of Chicago? It seems to me I did."

"N—um, well yes, perhaps. Yes, I believe you are right," acquiesced Bert, putting down some figures in the little notebook so vigorously that the pen point protested sputtering, making the ink fly to the right and left.

"Looks like Christmas is making inroads in my bank account. Oh, but the joy I get out of buying the things I have in mind; I wouldn't trade for a dozen bankbooks with full pages of deposits. By the way, did you know Tom Masters at the university? Your fraternity pin made me think of him. He had one just like it."

A queer look shot across Bert's face. "Of course, he was the best old scout. Can't we talk over old times some evening?"

Three days later Louise, all expectancy, put the finishing touches to the living room—a small Christmas tree gracefully distinguished one end. Wreaths hung in the windows and little sprigs of holly ornamented the center ceiling light. Louise turned on the circuit of Christmas tree lights and sat down to admire the tree and collect herself. She was a little worried. What in the world had prompted her to be so brazen? Never before had she acted so. To say the least, her customary timidity had certainly been put to flight—had deserted her. She had not long to ponder, for the doorbell rang.

Bert, the picture of neatness, looked more than his usual six feet in height as he stood alongside of Louise when he greeted her. For the first few minutes the evening seemed doomed to be a miserable failure. Finally Louise could stand it no longer.

"You probably will hate me forever when I tell you this, but I can't keep up this farce any longer. I knew you never attended the University of Chicago. I knew exactly what school you graduated from and that it had been with high honors, too. I knew what type of family you came from and the kindly care you gave your mother. I learned these things from the woman I am living with, as she is an intimate friend of your aunt. I have been lonely for company since my coming here and so determined I would not spend this evening, of all the ones in the year, alone. Now you can hate me if you like. I wouldn't blame you."

"On the contrary, I think this is a lark. I had a presentiment of just such a situation, but I couldn't imagine why you picked out this evening—Christmas Eve—for me to come and talk to you about mythical fraternity brothers. I was sure tired of waiting for an introduction. Then you know my name and history? And at last the meeting," cried Bert with one of his famous smiles. "Well," praise be to Christmas and the courage it gave you!"

CHRISTMAS CAROLS

THE world these days is thrilling with the singing of Christmas carols. When the angels sang out their glad news above the plains of Bethlehem, they started all the best music and singing that our world has ever known.—Herald and Presbyterian.

Christmas Spirit

By Martha Banning Thomas

NOT the green wreath hung on the knocker of the door. Not the gleam of silver tinsel dripping from the Christmas tree. Not the pile of packages heaped about—fat packages, slim packages, packages fairly bursting with their own secrets. Not the plump turkey and cranberry sauce and pies steaming with fragrant, holiday odors. Not the blizzard of greeting cards coming by every mail. Not the exciting ring of the postman who has a special smile as he hands out the letters.

Not the happy voice of the carol-singers who tramp through the snow under the stars to bring a bit of Christmas cheer to those shut away from the usual festivities.

Not bulky stockings knobby with gifts. Not the crunch and squeak of footsteps on snow on a frosty night.

Not these things alone make Christmas. They all help. They add the happy trimming, as it were. But only as they take on the true spirit of this holy time do they merge into the power and the glory of the precious season.

Christmas! The interlude between the old year and the new. The promise of great things to come. The consummation of things that have gone.

The pricelessness moment when men may reach up and be God-like in their pity and understanding.

The Star of Bethlehem is a symbol—a gift—an opportunity for the justification of the faith that is in us.

Let us be merry. Let us be gay. Let us feel the last, full measure of happiness at this happy time. But let us also dedicate ourselves anew to the highest possible expression of Christmastide, tolerance, unselfishness, liberality, peace and good will toward men.

Sure, Santa Claus Was Here

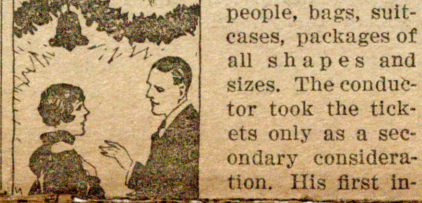

The CHRISTMAS EVE HOME-COMING

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

IT WAS so cheerful when the unknown crowds were left behind and the known ones appeared. That was on the last part of the journey. Dexter Lyons had been traveling all day and now it was dark and the lamps on the little branch line train were lighted and all the home-comers from all directions had met. Everyone knew everyone else on this train and the conductor knew them all.

The stove at the end of the train was burning almost too warmly. The train joggled along. The car was filled with people, bags, suitcases, packages of all shapes and sizes. The conductor took the tickets only as a secondary consideration. His first interest was in hearing how everyone had been, what they had been doing, when school or college began after the holidays, when the business folk must be back in the cities. To everyone he wished a merry Christmas.

They had hurried so to make connections, they had scrambled and pushed through the great holiday crowds. But now they were all sure they would get home on Christmas Eve. After they got on this train there could be no missing of connections and the conductor had promised them they would be on time.

Out of the windows occasional lights could be seen in the farmhouses they passed and in the streets of very small villages. But every house, no matter how separated and alone, was decorated. Christmas reached everywhere. It penetrated the traffic of cities and reached out to the most remote places.

There was a general chatter going on, a renewing of friendships, a talk between some who only saw each other at this time of the year, who had different interests and occupations and lived in different places but who enjoyed this annual little talk.

And then the engine gave a long, long whistle. It was not the ordinary whistle of an engine. It was the way the engine always whistled on Christmas Eve, so as to carry word to the waiting families and friends at the little station at the end of the line that the train was doing its part to wish them a merry Christmas by bringing its load of people.

Dexter was out on the station platform. Oh, such greetings as there were. And then a rush to the different homes where hot suppers were spread out upon candle-lit tables and where ruddy fires radiated their glow of cheer.

Dexter was surrounded by his family. And besides—there was Nancy. That made the home-coming perfect. For it gave him the hope, the unspoken promise that he would have his own, own home-coming before long.

Nancy would never have joined this family gathering on Christmas Eve when Dexter was just home, if she had not decided that certain matters he had taken up with her in letters were to be answered by assent!

"Oh, Nancy," he told her later, "it does, it does mean that you say 'yes,' doesn't it?"

And Nancy said that it did!

Lesson for December 5

RUTH AND NAOMI

LESSON TEXT—Ruth 1:14-22.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of Ruth.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Ruth a Loyal Daughter.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ruth the Loyal.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Message of the Book of Ruth.

In order to grasp the matter contained in the lesson subject, there must be swept into view the whole book of Ruth. The lesson text which is to be printed has been confined to the first chapter, verses 14-22.

I. Ruth's Connection With Naomi (1:1-15).

On account of famine in Bethlehem of Judah, Naomi with her husband and two sons sojourned in the land of Moab. After the death of her husband her two sons married Moabitish women. After a time her sons died also. After the death of her sons Naomi resolved to return to her homeland, having heard that the Lord had visited his people in giving them bread. They went to Moab to escape trouble but only got into more. It was not until Naomi was thus chastised that she resolved to return. One purpose of God's chastisement is to cause His children to return. Naomi had the good sense to recognize that the hand of the Lord was upon her for good. When the time came for her to go, Ruth and Orpah accompanied her for a distance. This she permitted but determined to place before them frankly the difficulties which would necessarily confront them.

II. Ruth's Noble Choice (1:16-18).

Much as Naomi loved her daughters-in-law, she would not have them go into this matter blindly. She wished them to know the seriousness of their undertaking. She told them the worst that could come upon them. This principle ought to be carried out by us in all our relations in life. In this respect Jesus is our supreme example.

1. No chance to marry again. Naomi told her that she had no more sons for whom she could wait. In that day to be unmarried was the greatest disgrace. Society differed then from now. No avenues were left open by which a woman could earn her living and be independent. Furthermore, it was against God's law for the Jews to marry outside of their own people.

2. She must renounce her gods. Her idolatrous worship could not be carried on in the land where God's people dwelt. This was delicately touched upon when Orpah went back (v. 15). Orpah went back when it was plain there was no chance to get a husband. Now Naomi puts an additional test upon Ruth, that of giving up her religion. Ruth was equal to the occasion. Her mind was fully made up. She was willing to accept as her God the one who was able to produce in His subjects the nobility of character she had observed in Naomi. Naomi's very frankness in dealing with her caused Ruth to be more determined to cast her lot with her. Ruth's position was so definite and unflinching that the very expressions have come down to us in words which "no poetry has outwitted, and no pathos has exceeded, and which have gone through centuries with the music that will not let them be forgotten." She was determined to share Naomi's journey, her home, her God, her lot in life, and her grave.

III. Blessings Which Attended Ruth's Faithfulness.

Ruth was never sorry for her choice, because:

1. She found the true God (1:16).

Instead of her heathen god who was unable to help her, she now had the living God, the God of Israel.

2. She found human friends (ch. 2). As she went to glean in the field she was led to the field of Boaz, a man of wealth and grace. The servants of Boaz treated her with consideration.

3. A good husband and a happy home (chs. 3, 4).

She not only secured a husband, but a man of God who had an abundance of this world's goods.

4. An honored place in the Israelitish nation (4:13-17).

Though she had to forsake her own people she became one of a nobler people.

5. She became a link in the chain of Christ's ancestry (4:13-22; cf. Matt. 1:5).

The one who fully decides for Christ and gives up all for Him shall gain a hundredfold in this life, and in the world to come eternal life.

Close to the deep, dark pool in which he and the Willow had disappeared often Baree, too, had stopped. He could hear the rippling of water, and his eyes shone with a gleaming fire as he gazed for Nepeese. He expected to see her there, her slim white body shimmering in some dark shadow of overhanging spruce, or gleaming suddenly white as snow in one of the warm splashes of sunlight. His eyes sought out their old hiding places; the great split rock on the other side, the shelving banks under which they used to dive like otter, the spruce boughs that dipped down to the surface, and in the midst of which the Willow loved to screen her naked body while he searched the pool for her. And at last the realization was borne upon him that she was not there, that he had still farther to go.

He went on to the tepee. The little open space in which they had built their hidden wigwam was flooded with sunshine that came through a break in the forest to the west. The tepee was still there. It did not seem very much changed to Baree. And rising from the ground in front of the tepee was what had come to him faintly on the still air—the smoke of a small fire. Over that fire was bending a person, and it did not strike Baree as amazing, or at all unexpected, that this person should have two great shining braids down her back. He whined, and at his whine the person grew a little rigid, and turned slowly.

Even then it seemed quite the most natural thing in the world that it should be Nepeese, and none other. He had lost her yesterday. Today he had found her. And in answer to his whine there came a sobbing cry straight out of the soul of the Willow.

Carvel found them there a few minutes later, the dog's head hugged close up against the Willow's breast, and the Willow was crying—crying like a little child, her face hidden from him on Baree's neck. He did not interrupt them, but waited; and as he waited something in the sobbing voice and the stillness of the forest seemed to whisper to him a bit of the story of the burned cabin and the two graves, and the meaning of the Call that had come to Baree from out of the south.

Chapter XVII

That night there was a new campfire in the open. It was not a small fire, built with the fear that other eyes might see it, but a fire that sent its flames high. In the glow of it stood Carvel. And as the fire had changed from that small smoldering heap over which the Willow had cooked dinner, so Carvel, the officially dead outlaw, had changed. The beard was gone from his face; he had thrown off his carbon-skin coat; his sleeves were rolled up to the elbows, and there was a wild flush in his face that was not altogether the tanning of wind and sun and storm, and a glow in his eyes that had not been there for five years, perhaps never before. His eyes were on Nepeese. She sat in the firelight, leaning a little toward the blaze, her wonderful hair glowing warmly in the flash of it. Carvel did not move while she was in that attitude. He seemed scarcely to breathe. The glow in his eyes grew deeper—the worship of a man for a woman. Suddenly Nepeese turned and caught him before he could turn his gaze. There was nothing to hide in her own eyes. Like her face, they were flushed with a new hope and a new gladness. Carvel sat down beside her on the birch log, and in his hand he took one of her thick braids and crumpled it as he talked. At their feet, watching them, lay Baree.

"Tomorrow or the next day I am going to Lac Bain," he said, a hard and bitter note back of the gentle worship of his voice. "I will not come back until I have—killed him."

The Willow looked straight into the fire. For a time there was a silence broken only by the crackling of the flames, and in that silence Carvel's fingers weaved in and out of the silken strands of the Willow's hair. His thoughts flashed back. What a chance he had missed that day on Bush McTaggart's trap-line—if he had only known! His jaws set hard as he saw in the red-hot heart of the fire the mental pictures of the day when the Factor from Lac Bain had killed Pierrot. She had told him the whole story. Her flight. Her plunge to what she had thought was certain death in the icy torrent of the chasm. Her miraculous escape from the waters—and how she was discovered, nearly dead, by Tuboa, the toothless old Cree whom Pierrot out of pity had allowed to hunt in part of his domain. He felt within himself the tragedy and the horror of the one terrible hour in which the sun had gone out of the world for the Willow, and in the flames he could see faithful old Tuboa as he called on his last strength to bear Nepeese over the long miles that lay between the chasm and his cabin; he caught shifting visions of the weeks that followed in that cabin, weeks of hunger and of intense cold in which the Willow's life hung by a single thread. And at last, when the snows were deepest, Tuboa had died. Carvel's fingers clenched in the strands of the Willow's hair. A deep breath rose out of his chest, and he said, staring deep into the fire:

"Tomorrow I will go to Lac Bain."

For a moment Nepeese did not answer. She, too, was looking into the fire. Then she said:

"Tuboa meant to kill him when the spring came, and he could travel. When Tuboa died I knew that it was I who must kill him. So I came, with Tuboa's gun. It was fresh loaded—yesterday. And—M'sieu Jeem"—she looked up at him, a triumphant glow in her eyes as she added in a whisper—"You will not go to Lac Bain. I have sent a messenger."

"A messenger?"

"Yes, Oookimow Jeem—a messenger. Two days ago. I sent word that I had not died, but was here—waiting for him—and that I would be Iskwa now, his wife. Oo-oo, he will come, Oookimow Jeem—he will come fast. And you shall not kill him. Non!" She smiled into his face, and the throb of Carvel's heart was like a dream. "The gun is loaded," she said softly. "I will shoot."

"Two days ago," said Carvel. "And from Lac Bain it is—"

"He will be here tomorrow," Nepeese answered him. "Tomorrow, as the sun goes down, he will enter the clearing. I know. My blood has been singing it all day. Tomorrow—tomorrow—for he will travel fast, Oookimow Jeem. Yes, he will come fast."

Carvel had bent his head. The soft tresses gripped in his fingers were crushed to his lips. The Willow, looking again into the fire, did not see. But she felt—and her soul was beating like the wings of a bird.

"Oookimow Jeem," she whispered—a breath, a flutter of the lips so soft that Carvel heard no sound.

If old Tuboa had been there that night it is possible he would have read strange warnings in the winds that whispered now and then softly in the tree-tops. It was such a night; a night when the Red Gods whisper among themselves, a carnival of glory in which even the dipping shadows and the high stars seemed to quiver with the life of a potent language. It is barely possible that old Tuboa, with his ninety years behind him, would have learned something, or that at least he would have suspected a thing which Carvel in his youth and confidence did not see. Tomorrow—he will come tomorrow! The Willow, exultant, had said that. But to old Tuboa the trees might have whispered, why not tonight?

It was midnight when the big moon stood full above the little open in the forest. In the tepee the Willow was sleeping. In the balsam shadow back from the fire slept Baree, and still farther back in the edge of a spruce thicket slept Carvel. Dog and man were tired. They had traveled far and fast that day, and they heard no sound.

But they had traveled neither so far nor so fast as Bush McTaggart. Between sunrise and midnight he had come forty miles when he strode out into the clearing where Pierrot's cabin had stood. Twice from the edge of the forest he had called; and now, when he found no answer, he stood under the light of the moon and listened. Nepeese was to be here—waiting. He was tired, but exhaustion could not still the fire that burned in his blood. It had been blazing all day, and now—so near its realization and its triumph—the old passion was like a drunken wine in his veins. Some where, near where he stood, Nepeese was waiting for him, waiting for him. Once again he called, his heart beating in a fierce anticipation as he listened. There was no answer. And then for a thrilling instant his breath stopped. He sniffed the air—and there came to him faintly the smell of smoke.

With the first instinct of the forest man he fronted the wind that was but a faint breath under the starlit skies. He did not call again, but hastened across the clearing. Nepeese was off there—somewhere—sleeping beside her fire, and out of him there rose a low cry of exultation. He came to the edge of the forest; chance directed his steps to the overgrown trail; he followed it, and the smoke smell came stronger to his nostrils.

It was the forest man's instinct, too, that added the element of caution to his advance. That, and the utter stillness of the night. He broke no sticks under his feet. He disturbed the brush so quietly that it made no sound. When he came at last to the little open where Carvel's fire was still sending a spiral of spruce-scented smoke up into the air it was with a stealth that failed even to rouse Baree. Perhaps, deep down in him, there smoldered an old suspicion; perhaps it was because he wanted to come to her while she was sleeping. The sight of the tepee made his heart throb faster. It was light as day where it stood in the moonlight, and he saw hanging outside it a few bits of woman's apparel. He advanced soft-footed as a fox and stood a moment later with his hand on the cloth flap at the wigwam door, his head bent forward to catch the merest breath of sound. He could hear her breathing. For an instant his face turned so that the moonlight struck his eyes. They were aflame with a mad fire. Then, still very quietly, he drew aside the flap at the door.

It could not have been sound that roused Baree, hidden in the black balsam shadow a dozen paces away. Perhaps it was scent. His nostrils twitched first; then he awoke. For a few seconds his eyes glared at the bent figure in the tepee door. He knew that it was not Carvel. The old smell—the man-beast's smell, filled his nostrils like a hated poison. He sprang to his feet and stood with his lips snarling back slowly from his long fangs. McTaggart had disappeared. From inside the tepee there came a sound; a sudden movement of bodies, a startled ejaculation of one awakening from sleep—and then a cry, a low, half-smothered, frightened cry, and in response to that cry Baree shot out from under the balsam with a sound in his throat that had in it the note of death.

In the edge of the spruce thicket Carvel rolled uneasily. Strange sounds were rousing him, cries that in his exhaustion came to him as if in a dream. At last he sat up, and then in sudden horror leaped to his feet and rushed toward the tepee. Nepeese was in the open, crying the name she had given him—"Oookimow Jeem—Oookimow—Jeem—Oookimow Jeem—" She was standing there white and slim, her eyes with the blaze of the stars in them, and when she saw Carvel she flung out her arms to him, still crying: "Oookimow Jeem—Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

In the tepee he heard the rage of a beast, the moaning cries of a man. He forgot that it was only last night he had come, and with a cry he swept the Willow to his breast, and the Willow's arms tightened around his neck as she moaned:

"Oookimow Jeem—It is the man-beast—in there! It is the man-beast from Lac Bain—and Baree—"

Truth flashed upon Carvel, and he caught Nepeese up in his arms and ran away with her from the sounds that had grown sickening and horrible. In the spruce thicket he put her feet once more to the ground. Her arms were still tight around his neck; he felt the wild terror of her body as it throbbed against him; her breath was sobbing, and her eyes were on his face. He drew her closer, and suddenly he crushed his face down close against hers and felt for an instant the warm thrill of her lips against his own. And he heard the whisper, soft and trembling:

"Oo-oo, Oookimow Jeem—"

"Oookimow returned to the fire, alone, his Colt in his hand, Baree was in front of the tepee waiting for him. Carvel picked up a burning brand and entered the wigwam. When he came out his face was white. He tossed the brand in the fire and went back to Nepeese. He had wrapped her in his blankets, and now he knelt down beside her and put his arms about her.

"He is dead, Nepeese."

"Dead Oookimow Jeem?"

"Yes. Baree killed him."

She did not seem to breathe. Gently, with his lips in her hair, Carvel whispered his plans for their paradise.

"No one will know my sweetheart. Tonight I will bury him and burn the tepee. Tomorrow we will start for Nelson House, where there is a Missioner. And after that—we will come back—and I will build a new cabin where the old one burned. Do you love me, ka sakahet?"

"Ooi—yes—Oookimow Jeem—I love you—"

Suddenly there came an interruption. Baree at last was giving his cry of triumph. It rose to the stars; it wailed over the roofs of the forests and filled the quiet skies—a wolfish howl of exultation, of achievement, of vengeance fulfilled. Its echoes died slowly away, and silence came again. A great peace whispered in the soft breath of the tree tops. Out of the north came the mating call of a loon, about Carvel's shoulders the Willow's arms crept closer. And Carvel, out of his heart, thanked God.

[THE END.]

Probable Reason

"Well! well! Look at that fellow running and turning his head first one way, then the other, as he flees!" exclaimed a guest. "What do you suppose he is doing that for?"

"Not knowing the gent, can't say for certain," replied the landlord of the tavern at Peeweeuddyhump, "but prob'ly it is b'cuz he ain't able to turn it both ways at once."—Kansas City Times

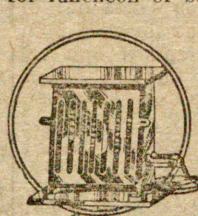

The KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

The buoyancy of health is real enjoyment. Strength, mental vigor, vivacity, and good nature spring from good digestion; good digestion is secured only from eating and drinking proper quantities of food and liquid. It is possible to enjoy buoyancy of spirit and good appetite every day.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

When you don't know what to have for luncheon or supper, try:

Spanish Toast.—Cut up two green peppers, add a slice of onion, two sprigs of parsley minced, and a cupful of thick tomato sauce. Simmer the mixture until smooth. Toast rounds of bread, butter and put a spoonful of the tomato mixture on each round of toast with a poached egg on top.

Fish Balls.—Make a white sauce using one tablespoonful of butter, one of flour, with salt and pepper to taste, one-half cupful of milk, and two well-beaten eggs. Cook until smooth, then stir in the flaked fish. Drop this batter by spoonfuls into hot fat. Drain on brown paper and serve at once.

Ham and Hominy.—When there is a bit of ham left from dinner, mince it and add it to cooked hominy which has been fried in ham fat, adding minced onion or parsley to the mixture; serve hot.

Haricot of Mutton.—Fry two tablespoonfuls of onion in two tablespoonfuls of drippings, add one and one-half pounds of mutton cut into two-inch pieces, salt and pepper well and cover with boiling water. Cook slowly until the meat is tender. Serve with buttered lima beans.

Apple and Marshmallow Dessert.—Peel, quarter and slice six juicy apples. Have ready one-third cupful of seedless raisins, one cupful of sugar. Arrange the apples and raisins with the sugar in layers in a buttered baking dish; add one-fourth of a cupful of water, cover and bake in a moderate oven until the apples are tender. Brush with butter and arrange marshmallows an inch apart over the apples. Place in the oven long enough to plump and brown the mallows. Serve with cream.

Cocoa Angel Food.—Sift one cupful of sugar with one-fourth cupful of cocoa. Beat the whites of a cupful of eggs until stiff, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cream of tartar to the eggs and another fourth to three-fourths of a cupful of flour. Fold in the sugar and cocoa, then the flour, adding a bit of salt and a teaspoonful of flavoring of vanilla.

A lemon custard or cream pie is made more attractive and tasty with a few marshmallows dotted over the top of the pie or set into the meringue and browned with it.

Club Luncheon.

This is the time of the year when much entertaining is being done. While the budget for these affairs is frequently limited, yet it is possible with careful planning to serve delicious luncheons for a very small outlay.

In cold weather there should always be a hot course, either soup or a hot entree with cold meat, potato chips, pickles, rolls, jelly and a dessert. One may serve a fruit cup, sliced smoked tongue, scalloped potatoes, rolls, jelly, olives and dessert. For hot dishes, baked beans, macaroni and cheese, celery cooked and served with cheese sauce, candied sweet potatoes—any one goes nicely with sliced cold meat, tongue or meat loaf or with hot frankfurters. If the meal starts with a cupful of good broth a heavy nourishing salad will take the place of meat, then follow with dessert. The following are a few quantity recipes which will assist in preparing a menu for several:

California Salad Dressing.—Take three-fourths of a cupful of orange juice, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of sugar, three eggs and two cupfuls of cream. Beat the fruit juices, add salt and sugar and eggs lightly beaten, stirring and cooking in a double boiler. When thick, cool, and just before serving add the cream whipped until stiff. This recipe makes one quart of dressing.

Sunflower Salad.—Peel eighteen oranges and separate into sections. Stone fifty dates and chop with one-half cupful of nut meats. Arrange the orange sections petalwise on lettuce, using three heads ordinary size; place a ball of the date mixture in the center of each flower. Use the mayonnaise or any desired salad dressing. This amount serves twenty-five.

Fruit Salad.—Take eight oranges, six bananas, three apples and one can of pineapple. Cut and mix as usual with the above dressing. Serves twenty-five.

Cottage cheese and pear, pear and tomato, stuffed dates with cottage cheese, canned pineapple and pear, all make delicious salads.

A molded vegetable or meat salad is always welcome and when molded always looks well and serves easily and in uniform portions. It may be molded in one large receptacle or mold and cut into uniform sizes.

MINE GAS POISONING

SO MANY mine accidents have occurred in mining sections in the past few months that there has been a great revival of interest in mine gases and the way they act.

In a recent issue of the Bulletin of the New York Academy of Medicine appears a lengthy discussion of the way mine gas, which is simply carbon monoxide, affects the victim. That it generally acts quickly, at least to the point of paralyzing the individual, there is apparently abundance of proof. This has been clearly shown in many mine accidents where, after the rescue party got into the mine, dead men were found with their lunches in their hands or even holding tools with which they had been working.

Besides the fatal cases in which miners are overwhelmed by a rush of gas which hardly gives them time to move in their tracks, miners are frequently affected by small amounts of gas, only enough to produce a headache or throbbing in the head, blurring or dimming of the eyes, roaring in the ears and a feeling of weakness and a giving way in the legs. In some cases there is a sweetish taste or dryness in the throat, nausea or pain in the stomach.

Glaister, who has studied the subject fully, says that old miners have told him that the first warning of danger they had was the feeling of weakness but that the gas had already so dulled their minds that they went on working in a mechanical way, until they fainted without making any effort to escape.

In the great English disaster at Snaefall mine, Sir D. N. Fastes, a well-known authority on mine gases, was in the rescue party and was himself overcome by gas. "I suddenly felt queer," he says. "I took out my little brandy flask, but already my fingers were incapable of opening it. Everything was in a whirl. I seemed to be in a thick, dense fog. We all stood still without making any effort to escape." In this condition, his mind was perfectly clear. He wrote a farewell letter to his wife and children. "I was paralyzed," he says, "but my mind was still working. My general sensation was like a bad dream." When he was rescued and brought to the surface, he was in full possession of his senses, but still unable to move.

CARING FOR THE MENTALLY SICK

IT IS strange, indeed, that it has taken man so long to understand the close relation between man's mind and his body. For long centuries people apparently believed that there was no connection between them and that any affliction of the mind had nothing to do with the state of the body.

So poor unfortunates with deranged, warped and twisted minds were regarded as possessed of devils, witches ridden, possessed of evil spirits and in league with the powers of darkness, when they were only sick people whose minds couldn't work straight because their bodies were diseased and suffering. Strange that no one long ago grasped the simple idea that if the insane man was put under the best surroundings and given the best treatment, which would make him and keep him as physically well and happy as possible, he would at least have that much better chance of overcoming his mental affliction.

But the only idea that men could grasp in those days was that an insane man was so different from a sane one that ordinary care and comfort were thrown away on him. So insane or supposedly insane persons were tied and chained and put in straight jackets, although how or why that was supposed to be good for their disturbed minds no one knows.

But we are getting better and saner ideas now ourselves. In a recent number of the Trained Nurse, Anna G. McGrady, in an article for trained nurses, tells how to care for the mentally sick. Not the insane or the "nuts" nor the "loonies," but the mentally sick. That phrase alone shows how far we have advanced. For many years now, she says, nurses have prided themselves on being especially expert in caring for medical or surgical patients. Now they specialize in nursing mental patients.

This does not mean simply caring for patients who are violently insane, but those whose minds are abnormal, who have strange fears and worries, who can't make most people understand what is the cause of their troubles.

One encouraging feature is that there has in the last few years been much more interest and assistance given to mental patients. Much of this is doubtless due to the large number of shell-shocked, mentally disturbed men left by the World War. Men, perhaps strong and robust physically, who couldn't get their minds down to every-day things again and forget the horrors they had seen or experienced in France.

No humane person would think of giving a sick person anything but the best care. The mentally sick are far more deserving the tenderness and most intelligent help which can be given.

Mothers, Do This—

When the children cough, rub Musterole on their throats and chests. No telling how soon the symptoms may develop into croup, or worse. And then's when you're glad you have a jar of Musterole at hand to give prompt relief.

As first aid, Musterole is excellent. Keep a jar ready for instant use. It is the remedy for adults, too. Relieves sore throat, bronchitis, tonsillitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, headache, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, pains and aches of back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, chilblains, frosted feet and colds of the chest (it may prevent pneumonia).

To Mothers: Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Compromised

"My wife started a row with me this morning, just as I was coming away," on the porch of the tavern at Tumlinville, related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "But I was in too big a hurry to quarrel, and so I compromised with her."

"How did you do that?" queried an acquaintance.

"Aw, I just hollered, 'Don't believe a word you say, but I agree with it all!' and whipped up and drove away as fast as I could."—Kansas City Star.

Bertha Holm of Worth A Bride

Saturday afternoon, Nov. 20th at 4 o'clock in the Trinity Evangelical Lutheran church in Oak Lawn, Illinois, Miss Bertha W. Holm, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Holm of Worth, became the bride of Arthur K. Hill of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Prange, pastor of the church. During the ceremony, a group of young ladies, concealed behind a row of ferns and potted plants, sang two nuptial songs, "O, Promise Me," and "I Love You Truly."

The bride was attired in a gown of white satin, trimmed with lace and rhine stones. She wore a long white veil in cap effect trimmed with orange blossoms and carried a huge bouquet of white roses.

The bride's maids were, Miss Edna Kreis of Blue Island, a cousin of the bride. She was gowned in pink and carried a bouquet of pink roses, and Miss A. Hill, sister of the groom, dressed in yellow and carrying yellow roses. The Maid of honor was Miss Lillian Preebe of Chicago, cousin of the bride, who wore a frock of green and carried red roses.

The flower girl was little Miss Dorothy Holm, niece of the bride. Mr. Wurm of Chicago served as best man, while Louis Holm, brother of the bride and Wm. Sievert of Worth, ushered in the bridal party.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the Eagle Hall in Blue Island, where a five course dinner was served to about 150 guests. Mr. Wurm served as Toast master. The tables were centered with a large wedding cake and decorated with fern leaves and red roses which were used for favors.

At the close of the dinner a social hour was held in the ball room where music, dancing, readings and songs were the diversions of the evening.

At 12 o'clock the bride removed her veil and tossed her bridal bouquet into a circle of young people.

Each guest received a piece of the wedding cake on departing. Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on a trip to N. Carolina and upon their return will reside in Beverly Hills.

Cousins of the bride from Marley and vicinity who attended the wedding were, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Sass, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Armstrong, Miss Minnie Handorf, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauffer, Mrs. Chas. Lahmann, Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Holm and family and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith of Goodings Grove.

MOKENA

A group of relatives and friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hentsch Thanksgiving evening in their home in honor of their 6th wedding anniversary.

Bunco was played at 4 tables prizes being awarded to Mrs. Hugh Deadmore of Joliet, Mrs. Verda Simmons of Chicago, Mrs. F. Hentsch, Gus Werner, and Wilber Teska.

Much merriment was afforded when an old fashioned quadrille was danced. Supper was served, a large wedding cake graced the center of the dining table.

Roy Krapp is ill in his home with pneumonia.

A son was born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Speicher.

Th Geo. J. Hacker and Frank Vally families have returned to their Mokena homes from New Lenox.

Seals Once Land Animals?

Seals are probably of land origin, but have become almost perfectly adapted to life in the water. They seek land or ice floes only for breeding and rearing of young.
